[redacted] Jay Sourwine, Counsel of the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, called to say Senator Eastland had been trying to obtain "portable telephone scramblers". Eastland was turned down when he requested this equipment through the Senate on the basis that it would establish a precedent and other senators would also want this equipment. Sourwine asked if it was possible for the Agency to make this equipment available to the Subcommittee on a "loan" basis. I told him I would look into it and be in touch with him.
